Since that time thousands of copies have been used and Paragon Shorthand now counts its devotees in almost every part of the civilized globe where there are English-speaking people. The author is in possession of stacks of letters from students of Paragon, many of whom previously wrote some other system, expressing complete satisfaction with Paragon Shorthand and setting forth that the system has more than fulfilled every claim made for it. Business schools are now using this book and Boards of Education of various cities have adopted it for their High Schools, discarding the systems previously taught. Journals of the shorthand profession are now beginning to publish editorials and articles by expert reporters, which support the correctness of the principle on which Paragon Shorthand is founded: That speed in writing shorthand is more a matter of manual dexterity than the result of the use of an abundance of expedients for contracting the writing, special short cuts, etc.; all of which hinder speed because they cause a tremendous mental friction and do not leave the hand free to proceed unhampered and unimpeded.
