Forgotten Books, United States, 2015. Paperback. Book Condition: New. 229 x 152 mm. Language: English . Brand New Book ***** Print on Demand *****.Excerpt from The Naturalist s Diary: A Day-Book of Meteorology, Phenology and Rural Biology Correlations exist between the leafing of trees, the germination of seeds, and the temperature on the grass; between the blossoming of flowers and the appearance of insects; between the ripening of fruit, the appearance of insects, and the temperature in the sun; between the appearance of insects and their larvae, the ripening of fruit and seeds, and the nesting and migration of birds - all of which are of great scientific interest, and of practical value to persons engaged in rural occupations, as is also a knowledge of the first appearance of insect pests, with a view to their early destruction. To the botanist, entomologist, and ornithologist, and especially to the young naturalist, the Diary will serve as a guide to the localities and the seasons where and when the objects he wishes to study may be found; and it will supply lists of objects to be looked for on each day of the year. It will also enable him to record the results of his observations in a systematic manner, and where they can be preserved for future reference. To all persons, whether living in town or country, the Diary will afford space for recording the results of their out-door occupations, or for such personal observations as show the relation of the human body to the other phenomena recorded. The relation of the growth of children to the seasons of the year, of diseases and epidemics to varying conditions of climate, and of periodic phenomena common to men and the lower animals, are of this kind, and are all deserving of careful...
